Regenerative Luxury, Rooted in Nature

At Al Baleed Resort Salalah by Anantara, sustainability isn't just a buzzword; it's woven into every experience. From meaningful guest participation to behind-the-scenes innovation, our holistic approach aims to regenerate rather than simply reduce.

The beating heart of our commitment is the Al Baleed Farm; a 4,037 sqm green haven cultivated on once-unused land. Today, it supplies a bounty of herbs, fruits, and vegetables to our restaurants, spa, and bar menus, from Thai basil and lemongrass to freshly pressed sugarcane and fragrant homegrown frankincense.

For those seeking a deeper connection, our resident farm guru, Adil Hussain, offers a personalised farm experience; guiding guests through the lush grounds and inviting them to fully immerse themselves in our thriving green sanctuary

Our efforts extend beyond the soil. We've replaced single-use plastics with glass water bottles in guest rooms; cleaned and refilled daily and introduced wooden room keys to further reduce waste. Through our Dollar for Deeds programme, guests can support local environmental efforts with a voluntary OMR 1 donation, with proceeds going directly to conservation initiatives via our partnership with the Environment Society of Oman.

By blending ancient traditions with innovative solutions, Al Baleed Resort is setting a new standard for luxury hospitality; one rooted in nature, inspired by culture, and led with care.
